Budget for Twin Cities
Is Made Public By Army Officials

Active campaigning for the local Salvation Army budget will begin on Thursday, November 6, according to members of the advisory board and those who have accepted responsible places in the campaign organization. A system whereby group chairman shall outline the campaign and furnish names of persons to be solicited has been adopted. The group chairmen with headquarters at the Rahm Clothing company, are Mrs. Frank Morrow, Mrs. A. H. Higson and W. W. Rahm. The group chairmen with headquarters at the Decatur Ice Cream and Creamery are Mrs. Vera Austelle, Mrs. J. T. Jones, John C. White and J. W. Clifton.

It is expected that in a short time these two groups will announce a completed organization, which will provide that every block and street of the Twin Cities from the southern limits of Albany to the Tennessee river will be taken care of. Mrs. Leonie Rothfuss has agreed to furnish Captain Kearns of the local Salvation Army with a complete list of the Salvation Army workers of last year for use by the committees.

The "group system" was decided upon in a council meeting held at the R. R. Y. M. C. A. last night, following a dinner for campaign workers.

The dinner was served by the ladies of the Westminster Presbyterian church and was greatly enjoyed. Those in attendance were: Commandant W. M. Bouterse of Birmingham, secretary of the "Dixie Division" of the Salvation Army, D. O. Drake, W. W. Rahm, J. O. Richardson, J. Walter Clifton, Charles Ronutree, C. L. Kearns, J. C. Write, Mrs. Vera Austelle, Miss Gladys Bernardi, Mrs. Frank Morrow, Mrs. Frank R. King, Mrs. A. H. Higson, Mrs. L. M. Rothfuss, Miss Leonie A. Rothfuss, C. J. Randolph, J. F. Lovin and J. E. Blair. The ladies of the Westminster church who served the dinner were: Mrs. J. D. Jervis, Mrs. George Jackson, Miss Amanda Pride and Misses Mae and Louise Tisdale.

Election Announcement

Prayer was offered by Captain Kearns when the diners were seated. And then C. J. Randolph requested that a short time be allowed Superintendent R. W. Cowart to announce that in case voters in Tuesday's election desired to vote for B. L. Malone and John T. Kyle as members of the Morgan County board of education it would be necessary for the names of those gentlemen be written in on the official ballot.

The first speaker announced by John C. White, chairman of the advisory board of the local Salvation Army, who was toastmaster, was Commandant Bouterse who after explaining the work of the Salvation Army, urged every worker in the campaign to "do with their might what their hands found to do".

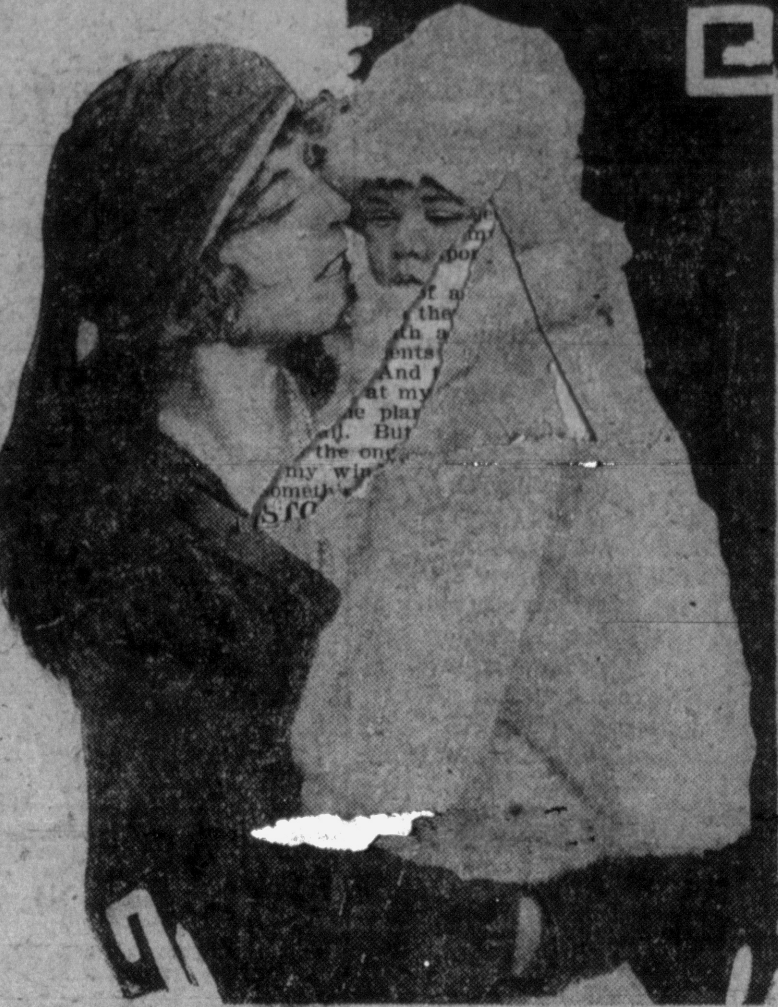

After speaking at some length the Commandant, excused himself in order to catch the south bound Pan-American.

The entertainment numbers were a reading by Miss Gladys Bernardi, and a vocal duet by Misses Mae and Louise Tisdale, with Mrs. George Jackson as piano accompanist.

During the sensational trial of the suit for an accounting of the $88,000 estate of the late Jay Gould, it was alleged that Mrs. Guinevere Sinclair Gould, second wife of the late George J. The Tennessee Valley laboratory, during the month of October, examined 2722 specimens, according to the monthly report made today by Director Perolio to the Alabama state board of health.

Of the total, 1463 examinations were made for diphtheria and 262 positives found. Director Perolio, however, called attention of the public to the fact that these figures did not mean that there were 262 cases of diphtheria in the Tennessee Valley, inasmuch as some of the same patients were examined several times.

The report does not mean," said Director Perolio, "that there were 262 cases of diphtheria. We found 262 slides positive. A number of cases had probably a dozen examinations, all proving positive, before being cleared of dip organism. Some carriers would run positive a half a dozen times before their throat and nose could be cleared of organisms by their family physicians."

November Grapes
Are Picked Here

Mrs. J. Braden Fleming, 810 Canal street Decatur has the very unusual experience of picking grapes from the vine in November. For some unknown reason, the grapes neglected to ripen at the time usually allotted by nature. Mrs. Fleming states that she has been picking ripe grapes from the vine, which grows in her yard since August. There are still a number of grapes on the vine, some green and others beginning to ripen. It is said that the fruit has heretofore been normal and no excuse has been found for its peculiar behavior.

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—The largest electorate that ever cast a vote in any nation undertook today the task of unraveling the most puzzling tangle in modern American political history.

With three major candidates in the field for president; with a full membership of the house to be chosen; with 34 senators and 34 governors to be elected and with thousands of lesser offices to be filled the 20 odd million qualified voters of the nation began their march to the polls at dawn and throughout the length and breadth of the land, under generally fair weather conditions, they continued all day to record their will.

Four months of fervid oratory charges, recriminations, accusations, claims, predictions and warnings were stored in the thoughts of the voters as they voiced their decision on their ballots.

Ring in their ears were the final pleas were the three major aspirants for the presidency. The republican and democratic standard bearers, Calvin Coolidge and John W. Davis, established a precedent in political campaigning by addressing an eleventh hour appeal last night to an audience that reached from coast to coast.

Senator LaFollette, the independent candidate, closed his case with a statement to the voters.

President Coolidge's plea was one to urge every qualified citizen to vote today. "We shall always have with us," he said, "an element of discontent, an element inspired with more zeal than knowledge. They are greatly in the minority, but their number is large enough to be a decisive factor in many elections unless it is offset by the sober second-thought of the people who have something at stake, whether it be earnings from investment or from employment who are considering not only their own welfare but the welfare of their children and coming generations."

Coolidge Confident
WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—President Coolidge expects a vote in the electoral college of at least 350 and a republican working majority in the house next session of 20 or more, it was said today at the white house.

The estimate is based on reports from Chairman Butler, of the republican national committee. The working majority expected, it was said, is exclusive of the insurgent group.

Friends of the president, who visited the white house today, said they found Mr. Coolidge well satisfied with the conduct of the campaign and feeling that no apologies were necessary regardless of the outcome.

The president also believed expenses had been cut down and scrutinized more closely than ever before.

President Coolidge slept until eight o'clock this morning, a much later hour than usual. Soon after rising

(Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Nov. 4—Anton Rudzinski was shot and probably fatally injured today after he had gone to a polling place to vote. The police began search for several men, without any information as to the cause of the shooting.

The attack was the first violence in connection with the election.

Rudzinski dropped when a fusillade of shots was fired in and about the polling place on West 45th street, east of the stockyards.

The wounded man who is 47 years old and a teamster had not been active politically and the police were uncertain whether he was the intended target or the victim of a mistake.

The victim had found a line of men ahead of him and fearing he would be late at work, he started to leave. Then the shooting occurred.

The shots were fired from an automobile. The police learned that several men shortly before, had appeared at the polling place and asked for Michael Hastings, said to be democratic precinct captain. It was said Hastings objected to accompanying the men who had called him and turned away and the shooting occurred.

Reports of abductions of political workers and threatened encounters with revolvers came from two west side precincts soon after the Rudzinski shooting and police squads were rushed to the polling places.

ANOTHER TRAGEDY

(Associated Press)
JACKSON, Tenn., Nov. 4—E. W. Earholomew, 70, judge in a polling precinct at Middleburgh, Tenn., and his son, J. L. Earholomew, 40 are reported to have been killed and Prof. W. W. Rogers wounded shortly before noon today by Dan E. Powers, 50, who was defeated in the August primary as republican candidate for magistrate in Henderson county, according to advices received here.

One Man Killed

(Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Nov. 4—One man was shot and killed, another mortally wounded and a third, Claude Maddox, was seriously wounded in a revolver fight outside of a polling place where voters were balloting today.

The slain man and one of the wound were unidentified, the latter being unconscious and in a dying condition when taken to the county hospital.

Election officials and police said they did not know whether the shooting had anything to do with the election or not.

According to police reports, Maddox and the other two victims were in an automobile when another car drove up alongside and its occupants four men, opened fire on them.

The slain man is believed to have been John Mackey, a police character.

LIGHT VOTE IS CAST IN MORGAN

Morgan County Is Not Displaying Great Interest

A light vote was being cast in Morgan County, according to early reports from the various boxes.

Little interest seemed to have been manifested in the county, either in the presidential races or in the fate of the several amendments to the state constitution being voted on.

The vote in the county, however, is likely to run above that polled in 1920, because of the fact that so many women are casting their ballots this time.

Army Presenting Annual Budget

The Salvation Army is presenting its annual budget to this community through its Advisory Board, a board made up of prominent citizens of the Twin Cities. Each item of the proposed expenditure for the coming year has been plainly set forth so that the donors may know just how their money will be expended. The total amount of the budget is the modest sum of $3,700.00. This is certainly a modest sum to ask for to carry on such a commendable work as the Salvation Army is noted for, and the people of this community should provide them with this money.

A service report has been issued and will be distributed among the people as well as the itemized budget.

The Salvation Army not only carries on its religious work among the unchurched and among prisoners, but renders good service to this district in its institutional work, especially among unfortunate women. A prominent citizen this last Saturday passing in his automobile noticed an old lady along the road outside of Albany. The old lady was homeless and sick, and he brought her to the Salvation Army home. She is taken care of now. It is just this kind of service that makes the Army a good institution in the community.

Mighty Healing Power of Peterson's Ointment

"I wish I could publish all the grateful letters I get every week," says Peterson. "I don't believe anyone on this earth has such a happy time at work as I have. All I do is make Peterson's Ointment and read letters like these that come right from the heart."

"I had an ulcer on my ankle—had it 30 years and could not get it healed. For the last six years I had several doctors. I got one box of your ointment and it almost healed it and it was entirely healed before I had used the second one. I don't think there is a better remedy on earth." Mrs. J. C. Henderson, 520 Sprague street, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Peterson's Ointment is just as good for piles as it is for old sores. It stops itching of eczema almost instantly. It is believed that Saturday's game will show practically a reversal of form on the part of the Independents and they are due to give the Normal folks an afternoon of thrills and experience in the gentle art of manhandling, sometimes referred to as football playing.

The only position yet open is that at fullback with Hartselle yet nursing a few injuries that he received in the game at Falkville. The rest of the lineup is in good shape and will be on edge for the opening whistle on Saturday when the Florentines lineup for their initial invasion of the Twin Cities.

This afternoon a light workout was held between the Albany high players of Coach Webb and the Independents. The high school journey to the neighboring city of Hartselle his weekend in a tussle with Morgan County High one of the most ancient antagonists of the local school. The High gang emerged from the Sheffield melee with only a few minor injuries and is in good shape to give the Morgan County team a real battle on next Friday.

The Independents will follow on Saturday at 3:30 p. m. at the Cooper-Wells field. One of the best crowds in the history of local pigskin following is expected and another point that is to be placed before the spectators is the matter of remaining on the sidelines rather than assuming a station of responsibility on the field. It will be remembered that the presence of the crowd on the field during last season caused the loss of a touchdown by the local school to the Cullmanites. There are few teams that will take advantage of such a situation but sometimes you will run into them just such a result as was shown during last season.

Many growls and grumbles were issued from the speaking tubes of a local Alabama fan when he read the report in a state newspaper from Stegman of Georgia saying that Alabama was listed along with V. P. I., Florida, Washington and Lee with a tie game. Of course there was little cause for the grumbling of the irate fan because the record of his favorite will stand for itself at the check-up at the November curtain regardless of the errors of the Georgia mentor. However it is best for sport writers to adhere to the rules of every newspaper man "to get it first, but get it right."

Another feature that is of interest this week will be the meeting of the Rollins College Freshmen and the Alabama Rats. Here the meeting of old friends of the gridiron will again take place. Raymond Pepper is holding the left wing for the Bama rats while Coach Loyal H. Duyck is in charge of the training in moleskin circles at the Rollins institution. No doubt Duyck has had his men all set for Pepper and his ability to toss the oval some fifty to sixty yards will not be overlooked by the former Central mentor.

Coach Webb of Albany high has come in for some well earned praise this year in digging up a fighting aggregation from a bunch of green material at the start. Webb has not only exceeded the hopes of football adherents in this section by turning out a fighting team that knows how to stop the weight handicap but he has developed men that heretofore, had their talents displayed in darkness. Webb faces another team this week at Hartselle but do not look forward with misgiving after the upset of the Sheffield

Why stay on the washday treadmill?

No matter how long you travel on a treadmill, you never get anywhere. For the treadmill carries you back as fast as you move forward.

It's much the same with the weekly washday. You spend a day or more every week getting the clothes clean. Then the next week you go through the same thing all over again.

Send your family bundle to us. Our prices are as moderate as our services are varied—our work is always thorough, careful and reliable. Call us and step off the washday treadmill forever.

Politicians usually are cheap people who pay a high price for themselves.

A worse thing than being without sympathy is to have the "agin it" anti-anthropy.

Republics are forgetful as well as the people have to be constantly reminded what James Cox was doing this time a year ago.

AUTOMOBILES CONTINUE TO CUT INTO STREET RAILWAYS

Evidently the automobile is cutting deeply into the street car business in a number of cities and towns. Recently the Albany-Decatur street car line was discontinued because it no longer paid. The same thing is happening in a number of western towns and cities. The street car is being displaced by the automobile. It is claimed that the street car is no longer a fair return on investment.

In the Mobile Light and Railroad company a petition with the Alabama Public Service Commission asking permission to abandon street railway service on several streets. According to the petition was a financial statement showing a net income of only 85-100 per cent of net valuation during the year ending September 30, 1924. This is not enough to justify the service.

Perhaps the effect of automobile competition will be to weed out the unnecessary portions of street car services in cities and leave the most-used and most necessary lines still in operation. It would be a serious inconvenience to great numbers of people who are unable to own automobiles, to have street car service generally discontinued, and this, happily, is not likely to occur soon. There is danger, however, that it will come in time, for automobiles are increasing in use and each additional automobile put into use means a family lost as patrons to the street car system. People who have automobiles seldom ride in street cars.—Anniston Star.

OUR WOMEN CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNOR

The Democrats must be given the credit for discovering that women are "good material" to be made into governors. The states of Texas and Wyoming have women candidates for governor each with a strong prospect of election. Their election will mean that for the first time in the history of the country women will occupy the high offices of chief executive of two states of the American Union. Just a few years back women were given the franchise in Texas although they had been voting in a number of the Western states for a much longer period.

It is true that there are still many women who hold the ballot as a thing of indifferent value and many who have not even taken the preliminary steps to voting, but this aloofness from using this crowning privilege of citizenship was expected and can be overcome only by time and a growing familiarity with the purposes of the ballot in the Republic.

Only a very few years ago, the newspapers carried as important news stories of women being chosen to hold minor political offices, such as mayor, treasurer, clerk, etc., occasionally one going to the State Legislature, and one or two breaking into the House of Representatives in Washington. But their progress has been fast, considering all things, until today there are women running for governor, for United States Senate, and other offices of less importance. They are taking a prominent part in the present presidential campaign, and in every state they hold positions of honor in the councils of the several parties. Women have almost arrived in politics, and we may expect them to exercise more and more influence upon the political offices of the country as the years pass.—Selma Times-Journal.

LOS ANGELES' STRANGE EPIDEMIC RECALLS HISTORICAL PLAGUES

Two weeks ago a Mexican woman died in Los Angeles. Seventeen persons attended the funeral. Of that number thirteen have already been claimed by death, and physicians say the other four will die. One hundred per cent in favor of the Grim Reaper is a record in the recent history of medicine and disease.

It is said that this is the same disease which claimed tens of thousands in the great plague in London. Even if the disease is the same, it is not likely, owing to modern living conditions and sanitation, to say nothing of the great advantage the physicians have over the doctors of that day, that the epidemic will play havoc with Los Angeles as it did with London.

In the month of May, 1865, there were forty-three deaths in London, from the plague, from a population of approximately half million people. Los Angeles now has about 600,000 people. In June, the same year, there were 590 deaths; in July 17,036 deaths, and 31,150 deaths in August. The total number of deaths that year was 68,596.

In the fourteenth century Europe was afflicted with a series of epidemics, some of which almost wiped out entire populations. This plague was known as the Black Death. It appeared in Greece, Italy and France in 1347, and in England, Spain and Germany the following year. The mortality in England and other parts of Europe from the Black Death is estimated at two-thirds or three-fourths of the population. This disease was responsible for 25,000,000 deaths in Europe alone. No attempt has been made to estimate its mortality among the people of the Levant, from which it appears to have come.

In the 15th century the plague recurred. Eighty thousand persons died in and around Dantzic in 1427. In 1466 30,000 persons died in the city of Paris. In the next century it nearly depopulated China and again appeared in Europe. In 1563 people were dying from the plague in London at the rate of a thousand a week. And in 1570, 200,000 persons died in the city of Moscow and surrounding area.

The epidemic in Los Angeles, is called "pneumonic plague" and is related to the dread disease of my projected middle ages and succeeding generations. It is a disease for competent authorities to deal with. There seems to be a certain two which would be extremely fatal, daily, and both are organs.—Anniston

STONISHING REALITIES

The New York Evening Post stresses the wonderful realities of the voyage of the ZR-3 from Germany to the United States surpass the most extravagant dreams of a decade ago. A vessel 656 feet long—four-fifths the height of the Woolworth building—battling through fog and contrary winds, thousands of feet above the sea, while the pilot, as he rushes along at the rate of more than a mile a minute, seeks and obtains from the shore and vessels at sea that enables him to avoid the rougher weather conditions.

Built for peaceful purposes, this trip of the ZR-3 will indicate the commercial possibilities of these ships, and the venture therefore becomes greater importance than the voyages of any of its predecessors.

From Germany to New York in three days—from New York to Europe in less—is no longer a dream for travelers but looms up in the near future as a probability.—Montgomery Times.

Indeed we are living in a rapid age but we are prepared to accept the present swiftness as only a stepping stone to the unrevealed future. We are ready.—Huntsville Times.

A USEFUL "WEEK"

The multiplication of "weeks" promoted by various organizations to emphasize movements in which they are interested has made the public doubtful of the real value of some of them. This is as it should be. This attitude will tend to weed out those which do not merit attention and to give proper place to those which serve a useful purpose.

National Father and Son Week has already gained widespread approval, and the call for its observance from November 9 through November 16 will bring hearty response. It will be noted that the week includes Armistice Day, November 11. This arrangement, first practised a year ago, had the indorsement of the late President Harding.

National Father and Son Week represents a great ideal and offers opportunity to move farther toward that ideal. Its unusual appeal is evident in the fact that, although it had its beginning in the all-round program of the Young Men's Christian Association, observance of the week quickly spread beyond the wide circles of that organization. It has, indeed, transcended the limits of a single week's observance each year and has assumed the proportions of a through-the-year program. Many individuals, groups, and organizations are interested in it as such.

We gladly call the attention of our readers to the forthcoming Father and Son Week. It is primarily important that it should be observed by fathers and sons and its observance according to their own inclinations and agreements. The possible influence of the Father and Son idea upon family relationships and family life is a subject worthy of consideration by thoughtful men.

Fathers there are and have been from the dawn of history.

Sons there are and have been since Adam delved and Eve span.

Fathers have been written at and spoken to in words of every tongue on their duties to family, state and nation.

Sons have been exhorted, preached at, and sworn at in order to emphasize their obligation to obey parents, teachers, employers.

On the one hand, the hierarchy of fatherhood; on the other, the submission of sonship.

That is the old order—an order that is changing to a more rational relationship, thanks to the simplicity of an ideal which enjoys observance in this present Father and Son Week.

Father and Son. A partnership—a welding of personalities—a oneness in arriving at and in the expression of the fullness of life, work, happiness.

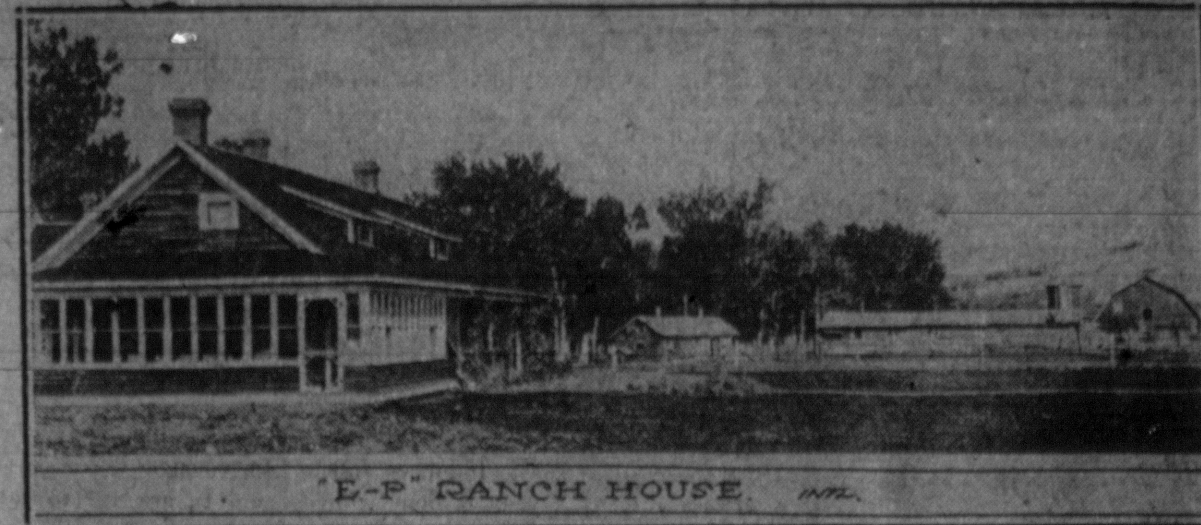

The Father and Son Movement asks fathers and sons to share each other, to play together, worship together, work together, not for a brief seven days, but for all the weeks and years ahead.

Here is a program which reaches out and into home, church, school and industry. Here is a great loom weaving a pattern of beauty and unity into the fabric of society.

Father and Son Week may rightly claim the place of honor among all the "Weeks" of the year.

The Day home was artistically decorated in Halloween motifs the dining room being especially so with ghosts in every corner white and black cats and Jack-O-Lanterns blinked from overhead and the sides. In one corner of the living room an old witch told fortunes from a boiling pot and next to this was a fish pond where each guest "caught" a Halloween favor. In the photo booth caricature pictures were "taken" of each. Elizabeth Ann Hinton got the prize for pinning on the cats head.
Later they were ushered to the dining room where they enjoyed ice cream and cake and black and yellow baskets filled with bonbons were presented to each guest present.

HALLOWEEN PARTY FOR S. S. CLASS

The Philathea class held a short business session in which the following officers were elected: Misses Hortense Mahoney, president; Daphne Nelson, first vice president; Kate Brothers, second vice president; Louise Matthews, third vice president; Laura Martin, secretary; Anna Tidwell, treasurer; Iva Mae McPride, reporter. AMUSEMENTS
"THE FOOL"
Channing Pollock's mastery of melodrama, plus a vital theme, makes "The Fool," which will be the offering at the Masonic Theatre Tuesday night, November 24th, a play of vibrating the chords of every soul. It pulsates with action, cool journey, and at the same time with Morgan that must prove to be the most ancient and to every right-minded soul. The doctrine upon which the play is based is simple and only one: that spiritual we in our material more often get lost. For possession, dependence, minister, son, Satan.
The steps of Jesus Christ; to sacrifice wealth, pride, the esteem of the powerful, and all ambition other than a passionate and all-consuming yearning to be of service to others.
Braving score and ridicule, cheerfully risking his very life, the man who dares to imitate the founder of the religion professed by the civilized world, goes his way. He is virtually ejected from the pulpit of a fashionable New York church. In industry where his generous spirit is misunderstood by employers and employees alike he likewise fails. The girl he loves marries another and less idealistic man. Still buoyed up by faith, he journeys hopefully through a materialistic world, finding happiness at last in the direction of a haven for the poor and unfortunate, the down-trodden, the sinful and the weak. But even in this altruistic enterprise he is pursued by malicious accusations and hatred.
The dramatic action reaches its climax when the drink crazed husband of a woman the clergyman has befriended, invades the mission at the head of a band of ruffians, bent upon destruction.
"The Fool" is enacted this season by a specially selected cast, the members of which played the same characters that they will portray here in the organizations which presented the piece with great success last season.
"The most dynamic love story ever written."
That was the consensus of opinion of the literary critics when Sir Hall Caine's novel, "The Eternal City," was published. Perhaps never before or since has there been such unanimty of opinion among book reviewers and you will understand why and when you see the film version which is at the Princess today for a last showing.

"The Eternal City" which was produced in Italy by George Fitzmaurice and is being released by First National, boasts of a remarkably bright cast, including Barbara La Marr, Lionel Barrymore, Bert Lytell, Richard Bennett and Montague Love.
The story centers about pretty Donna Roma, the belle of an Italian village, who loves David Dossi. Just as they are about to be married, the war breaks out and David enlists. When he is reported killed, Donna goes to Rome, accepting an offer of adoption from a countess, unaware that a wealthy man is furnishing the funds for her support.
David, who has escaped death, learns of Donna's whereabouts after a long search, and in a strange manner, and there is no corner of the earth that is not covered by the Associated Press. ## What the Strange Chinese Did to Reassure Midge.

At the unexpected apparition of a Chinese from the bushes behind me, I fought down the scream that rose in my throat, and springing backward, swept Junior behind me, the while my fingers went instinctively to the hiding place in my gown where lay the little silver pistol which at Katie's entreaty I had brought with me. How absurd my little maid's urging had seemed but a few short hours before, and—now—

"Misses Graham, no need to shoot. Lee Chow come for good—not evil. Misses Graham, look at Lee Chow. Lee Chow not hurt. No can do."

He folded his arms across his chest and stood motionless, patiently waiting for my critical inspection, and though my attitude in conventional American clothing seemed suddenly to breathe the intriguing air of the Orient.

I visualized him in his native costume standing thus, with slightly bowed head and hands folded, and something in the absolute stillness and calmness of his posture brought a certain reassurance to my soul, although I did not take my hand from the tiny pistol in my dress.

Junior tugged at my skirt with a whisper, "Let me see him, Ma-ma. I like him lots," and with a remembrance of my often expressed belief in the old saying concerning the correct intuitions of children and animals, I permitted him to stand at one side of me while I gazed at the mysterious newcomer the inspection he had invited.

I saw a man just below medium height, not especially slender, but with no suspicion of stoutness in his figure. There was a suggestion of great muscular strength about him, although his features at the first glimpse of them were those of a comedian instead of a man of deed, there was something so mirth-provoking in his face, so different from that of any other man of his race I had ever seen that I subjected his features to a much more rigid scrutiny than it they had been of the ordinary variety.

Why Has He Come?

His eyes glared so far upward that the corners appeared to be fixed up in his forehead, and to crinkle constantly with suppressed mirth. His nose was unusually flattened, and the nostrils were as provocative to amused laughter as those of a famous movie comedian.

His face was of the kind which has been immortalized as "low comedy," and it took me several seconds to discover that the fixed grin his mouth presented was the result of a scar long since healed which looked exactly as if his lips had been clipped with some pair of scissors.

Other scars were responsible for the unusual slant of his eyes, and his nose had been broken at one time and healed apparently without medical attention. His features looked exactly as if some malevolent tyrant

She Chats About a Green Jersey Day Frock.

THIS afternoon I went to call on a young married friend who lives not far from Madame's shop.

"I'm simply delighted to see you," Mabel said in a pleased tone. "Come in and I'll make a cup of tea."

She dashed out to put the water on to boil, and I removed my hat and wrap.

Mabel came back with a smile and said:

"I don't know when my living room has been so littered with things, but as you can see, I'm looking over all the bits of material I happened to have on hand."

Mabel makes all her own clothes, and she always looks too smart and trim for words.

"You are exactly the right person

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 5.

According to this day's astral activities, there may be a decided breaking up of old, crystallized conditions, which have stubbornly obstructed and thwarted, making way for a renewed and steady progress, with increase in business and success generally. There may be valued and timely assistance from old friends or long established institutions, but all of these favorable auguries may be nullified by rash and impulsive moves or an unguarded moment of ill-temper or irritability. Take things coolly and act with deliberation.

Those whose birthday it is have the prospect of a year of substantial growth and reward for industry and application, if they will keep a sharp curb on tongue and temper and refrain from rash or impulsive actions. Litigation should be shunned. A child born on this day should be industrious, persevering, studious and have good organizing ability. It should rise in life through its own good endowments, in spite of a tendency toward impulsiveness and possible ill-temper.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT The Best Uses of Clothes

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

WHEN you buy a new dress, Little Miss Snippet—you and your bobbed hair and your "sassy" little face and your bright eyes and those restless, eager little feet of yours—who do you buy your dress for?

For yourself or your friends—or even your enemy?

Do you dress to please the men, or do you dress to please the women?

Which would you rather be—a man's beauty or a woman's beauty?

There are two kinds, you know, and you really have to make up your mind about it when you begin to take a serious interest in dress.

A man doesn't care what you have on. He cares how you look, and that's all.

To Pep Up Your Spirits

Beauty parlors? It isn't the girls who live in the beauty parlors; it's the middle-aged women.

Eighteen and twenty are too busy going driving or dancing, or tramping or swimming, or singing or something, to bother overmuch with beauty parlors.

It's little Miss Thirty and Mrs. Thirty-five who are always being massaged and permanent-waved and reduced and beautified.

And they are many of them doing these things to please the men. Men always say they like a simple, wholesome, unaffected girl the best and when it comes right down to marriage sensible men usually do like that sort of a girl, but for parties and dances and the theatres—well, haven't you ever noticed—?

I know lots of women who like to look nice—just to look nice. They're fond of soft fabrics and pretty colors and becoming shades just as a bird is fond of bright plumage. It is as natural for the average woman to like dress as it is for the average man to love to go fishing.

And it's a good deal a matter of spirits too. Put on a dull old dress, brush your hair in the dull old way, wear a pair of shoes just the least mite shabby—and you'll feel as if you were fifty years old and nobody loves you and never had loved you and never will love you. Not anyone—not even the cook or the janitor or the telephone girl or the homeless tabby or the forlorn dog that sits on your doorstep and tries to look as if he belonged.

Blue—discouraged—bored? Don't stay in your room and cry—get out your prettiest dress and your sanest hat, have a new "do" to your hair and step out for a little walk—you'll feel like a new person inside and out.

Clothes Transform the World

Clothes? No, they're not vitally important. You can live, and live a useful, comforting, not entirely unhappy life and never care a cent for clothes, but really to get the savor of things, you have to be a part of them, and a new hat or a nice soft comfy coat—will sometimes turn a very gray sky into blue.

"Come on!" said Little Sister. "Let's go window shopping! Which one do you choose—the blue frock or the gray one?"

"I'll take 'em both, thank you. I'll wear the gray one outdoors and the blue one in the house, with a nice film of lace somewhere about it, and a silver comb and that queer bracelet somebody brought me from India and a nice pair of gay alippers—and who dares tell me that I'm not as young as I used to be and that the world isn't the gayest, friendliest sort of a place?"

"That's a nice hat in the corner—the one in brown and tan. Don't you wish you had it and a dress to match it? Let's plan out a costume in those colors."

"What? Ten o'clock and time to go home?"

"Well, well, and I thought this was going to be a long evening!"

Good for you, Little Sister, you've comforted your lonesome little heart with clothes—just as thousands of other women have done for years. Some day maybe you'll do what other women have done after they married, you'll plan some one else's clothes, some one little and chubby, don't you know, and then—

Ah, yes, clothes have their uses, haven't they, besides keeping you warm and covered?

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

Here Are Easy Ways to Stop Little Money Leaks.

WE have always been told that it happens two or three times we learn to manage so that it does not happen.

If we have not time, or if system is foreign to our make-up, the simplest way is to have a bill spike in the kitchen and on it place all the market slips of the day. At night, have the spikes removed to your desk and a fresh one set in the kitchen for next day's slips unless there is time to attend to them at once. In- sisting upon these slips for every purchase gives a complete record of each day's transactions. A simple day book with wide columns ruled off and headed: meats, groceries, bakery, ice, milk, fruits, vegetables, fish, household supplies, and all other headings called for, will make it easy to set down the entire outlay instead of special items which are already shown on the little daily slips. At the end of the week, or day, the total is given and the books easily kept. If desired to do things a little more elaborately the amount given to spend on the house each week may be put down beside the total and we will then know just how much we have over-run or saved and by the aid of the little slips can put our finger on the items that have run the bills up. This is not in any way bookkeeping that involves the keeper if she "hates figures" as many women do. The system is also simple enough for the man of the house to run over from time to time and see how things stand.

When there are no big bills coming in it is so easy to keep things moving happily and comfortably. It is safe to say that half the family troubles are brought about by bills that have the most unaccountable way of increasing in a totally unexpected manner. When we order and charge an item it never seems as if we had ordered very much, until the bill comes in, but when we order and pay we know just about how much ready cash we have with us and are rather careful not to overstep it, but will do without something that seems of the least importance in the order. Before we know it we unconsciously begin to manage and learn to handle money. Women who have never earned their own living are the slowest to learn the lesson of small finance.

It is always a satisfaction to know where money goes in housekeeping, whether we are accountable to the wage earner who supplies it or not, and for this reason the day book is suggested, where more elaborate methods are not desired.

YOUR HEALTH

No, Not All Fat People Need Worry About Weight

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

United States Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

ONE of my readers finds fault with me because of my attacks on fatness, or on fat people, as she puts it. She says, "If it is your nature to be fat, you will not feel well unless you are fat."

"All fat people I know are small eaters and lead very active lives," she continues. "The only abnormally big eater I know of is as thin as a rail."

This is the conclusion of the letter:

"It is not pleasant to have the stigma of laziness and self-indulgence upon you, simply because you had enough common sense and independence of mind to keep well and strong in spite of fads."

DR. COPELAND

There is much of truth in these criticisms. I, too, believe it is the nature of some people to be fat. Even though they eat little and exercise a lot every day they get fat and stay fat.

Some day we will understand a lot of things better than we do at present. There is much mystery now surrounding some of the facts of life. For instance, in our bodies are a number of so-called ductless glands. Some of the things they do for us we know about, but there is much that is unexplained. When these mysteries are untangled we can better govern our life processes.

While many cases of overweight can be accounted for on the ground of excessive eating of the wrong foods and by lack of exercise, there yet remain some cases where these causes are not responsible. My correspondent appears to come within this group.

I have never taught that it is excessive eating alone that causes obesity. The part eating plays a due to excessive indulgence in certain foods—quite a different thing. Let us assume that twenty ounces of food is a normal quantity to take every day. You might eat seventeen or eighteen ounces, and be more, and yet gain in weight for the reason that your diet was emphasizing too large a proportion of the fat-producing foods.

Personally, I like to see people plump and not scrawny. But there really is such a thing as having the chance of long life reduced by overplumpness. It is on this account that I preach such a manner of life as will keep the weight within bounds.

May I repeat what I have told you so many times? Some time ago the life insurance companies made a study of their records. This was called the "Medico-Actuarial Mortality Investigation." It appeared to prove that overweight should be a matter of concern. For instance, it demonstrated that in general, a man of fifty years who carries fifty extra pounds, has reduced his expectation of life fifty per cent.

Rosamund's weary eyes quickened to horror as she watched her—a horror prompted as much by the fate awaiting that poor child as by the undignified fury of the futile battle she waged against it. But it happened that her behavior impressed a Levantine Turk quite differently. He rose, a short squat figure, from his seat on the steps of the well.

"Sixty philips will I pay for the joy of taming that wild cat," said he.

But Ibrahim was not to be out-bidden. He offered seventy, the Turk countered with a bid of eighty, and Ibrahim again raised the price to ninety, and there fell a pause.

The dala spurred on the Turk. "Wilt thou be beaten then, and by an Israelite? Shall this lovely maid be given to a perverter of the Scriptures, to an inheritor of the fire, to one of a race that would not bestow on their fellow-men so much as the speck-out of a date-stone? It were a shame upon a True-Believer."

Urged thus the Turk offered another five philips, but with obvious reluctance. The Jew, however, entirely unabashed by a tirade against him, the like of which he heard a score of times a day in the course of trading, pulled forth a heavy purse from his girdle.

"Here are one hundred philips," he announced. "'Tis overmuch. But I offer it."

Here the dala's pious and reductive tongue could urge him further the Turk sat down again with a gesture of finality.

"I give him joy of her," said he. "She is thine, then, O Ibrahim, for one hundred philips."

The Turk dashed the purse to the dala's white-robed assistants and advanced to receive the girl. The corsairs thrust her forward against him, still vainly battling, and his arms closed about her for a moment.

"Thou hast cost me dear, thou daughter of Spain," said he. "But I am content. Come."

And he made shift to lead her away. Suddenly, however, fierce as a tiger-cat she writhed her arms upwards and clawed at his face. With a scream of pain he relaxed his hold of her, and in that moment, quick as lightning she plucked the dagger that hung from his girdle so temptingly within her reach.

"Valga me Dios!" she cried, and ere a hand could be raised to prevent her she had buried the blade in her lovely breast and sank in a laughing, coughing heap at his feet.

A final convulsive heave and she lay there quite still, whilst Ibrahim glared down at her with eyes of dismay, and over all the market there hung a hush of sudden awe.

Rosamund had risen in her place, and a faint color came to warm her pallor, a faint light kindled in her eyes. God had shown her the way through this poor Spanish girl, and assuredly God would give her the means to take it when her own turn came.

"Peace," said the dala. "Had it not been written it could not have come to pass. It is the will of Allah! Who dares rebel against it?"

The crowd began to murmur. "I want my hundred philips," the Jew insisted, whereupon the murmuring swelled into a sudden roar.

"Thou hearest?" said the dala. "Allah pardon thee, thou art disturbing the peace of this market. Away, ere ill befalls thee."

"Hence! Hence!" roared the crowd, and some advanced threateningly upon the luckless Ibrahim. "Away, thou perverter of Holy Writ! Thou filth! Thou dog! Away!"

Such was the uproar, such the menace of angry countenances and clenched fists shaken in his very face, that Ibrahim quailed and forgot his loss in fear.

"I go, I go," he said, and turned hastily to depart.

But the dala summoned him back.

"Take hence thy property," said he, and pointed to the body.

And so Ibrahim was forced to suffer the further mockery of summoning his slaves to bear away the lifeless body for which he had paid in lively potent gold.

The dala turned to the portly Aynab, who was plucking at his sleeve.

He bent his head to catch the muttered words of Penzileh's vaizer. Then, in obedience to them, he ordered Rosamund to be brought forward.

She offered no least resistance, advancing in a singularly lifeless way, like a sleep-walker or one who had been drugged. In the heat and the open market she stood by the dala's side at the head of the well, whilst he dilated upon her physical merits in that lingua franca which he used since it was current coin among all the assorted races represented there—a language which the knowledge of French that her residence in France had taught her she was to her increasing horror and shame able to understand.

The first to make an offer for her was that same portly Moor who had sought to purchase the two Nubians. He rose to scrutinize her closely, and must have been satisfied, for the price he offered was a good one, and he offered it with contemptuous assurance that he would not be out-bidden.

"One hundred philips for the milk-faced girl."

"'Tis not enough. Consider me the moon-bright loveliness of her face," said the dala as he moved on. "Chigil yields us fair women, but no woman of Chigil was ever half so fair."

"One hundred and fifty," said the Levantine Turk with a snap.

"Not yet enough. Behold the stately height which Allah hath vouchsafed her. See the noble carriage of her head, the luster of her eye! By Allah, she is worthy to grace the Sultan's own harem."

He said no more than the buyers recognized to be true, and excite-

"She offered no least resistance, advancing in a singularly lifeless way, like a sleep-walker."

At length Ibrahim roused himself from his momentary stupor. He stepped deliberately across the body, his face inflamed, and stood to beard the impassive dala.

"She is dead!" he bleated. "I am defrauded. Give me back my gold!"

"Are we to give back the price of every slave that dies?" the dala questioned him.

"But she was not yet delivered to me," raved the Jew. "My hands had not touched her. Give me back my gold."

"Thou liest, son of a dog," was the answer, dispassionately delivered. "She was thine already. I had so pronounced her. Bear her hence, since she belongs to thee."

The Jew, his face empurpling, seemed to fight for breath.

"How?" he choked. "Am I to lose a hundred philips?"

"What is written is written," replied the serene dala.

Ibrahim was frothing at the lips, his eyes were blood-injected.

"But it was never written that—" ment stirred faintly through their usually impassive ranks. A Tagareen Moor named Yusuf offered at once two hundred.

But still the dala continued to sing her praises. He held up one of her arms for inspection, and she submitted with lowered eyes, and no sign of resentment beyond the slow flush that spread across her face and vanished again.

"Behold me these limbs, smooth as Arabian silks and whiter than ivory. Look at those lips like pomegranate blossoms. The price is now two hundred philips. What wilt thou give, O Hamet?"

Hamet showed himself angry that his original bid should so speedily have been doubted.

"By the Koran, I have purchased three sturdy girls from the Sus for less."

"Wouldst thou compare a squat-faced girl from the Sus with this narcissus-eyed glory of womanhood?" scoffed the dala.

"Two hundred and ten, then," was Hamet's sulky grunt.
